About Elliston Vineyards

Elliston Historical Mansion was built in 1890. Henry Ellis, the last elected chief police officer of San Francisco, who made his fortune during the gold rush era, was on a trip passing Sunol and accidentally fell in love with the town's mild climate and sunshine, he then decided to build a summer resort here as a gift to his wife. Later, Mr. Ellis found Sunol's unique location in Northern California is very suitable for growing grapes, so he bought land next to the Mansion for grape cultivation, thus, the Elliston Mansion became Elliston Vineyards. Elliston Winery is conveniently located in the east of San Francisco Bay, Its ancient and mysterious historical background makes it one of the few old wineries in California that can still legally call their sparkling wine as "Champagne". Its paradise-like scenery also makes the winery the preferred venue for different sales of events and weddings.

About the winemaker

After the era of great navigation in the 15th and 17th centuries, "New World" wines have emerged. Compared with the strict rules of "Old World" wines, "New World" is more courageous to innovate, constantly developing new winemaking processes and studying the preferences of wine lovers in the new era, so as to produce wines that are more suitable for modern tastes. .

Kenny Zhao is the current owner of Elliston Vineyards and also the winemaker. He is innovative and bold with a strong enthusiasm for winemaking. With his own deep understanding of Asian and American cultures, he firmly believes in and is committed to producing wines that can challenge the most criticized taste buds. Therefore, in addition to Elliston grape fields, Kenny also selected good grapes in Napa Valley or winemaking. Over the years, he has joined hands with many top legendary Napa Valley winemakers to create a number of wines with excellent reputation. At the same time, by introducing multi-regional raw juice, he improved the diversity of brands and optimized the taste of wine through unique matching technology.

Under the management of Kenny, the current Elliston Vineyards not only retains ancient and fine traditions, but also has mature and perfect wine brewing technology. It is deeply loved by local residents and has a wide range of wine varieties, from Cabernet Sauvignon, champagne, bubbles, Chardonnay, Pinot Noir, to Muscato.....that you will definitely find your fit!
